Module Description

The second of two modules covering the syllabus at CEFR level B2.1, this course offers learners the opportunity to continue their study of Irish at intermediate level. The course will also further enhance understanding of the social, cultural and literary context of the language.

	Learning Outcomes On completion of this module the learner will/should be able to:
1.	Demonstrate further understanding of extended speech, lectures and TV programmes provided the topic is reasonably familiar.
2.	Demonstrate further understanding of texts concerned with contemporary problems and displaying particular viewpoints. Understand contemporary literary prose, albeit with some work.
3.	Interact with a greater degree of fluency that makes interaction with native speakers easier. Take active part in discussion in familiar contexts, accounting for and sustaining own views.
4.	Present clear descriptions on an expanded range of subjects related to fields of interest. Explain opposing viewpoints on topical issues.
5.	Write clear text on an expanded range of subjects related to fields of interest and conveying reasons for taking or opposing a certain viewpoint. Write communications of increased complexity highlighting the personal significance of events and experiences.
6.	Show a high degree of responsibility for self-directed learning.
7.	Demonstrate a critical understanding of selected literary texts and of their cultural and social context.

Indicative Syllabus

Grammar : The present subjunctive; complex use of the copula; reinforcement of the declension and genitive singular of the noun; the genitive plural of the noun; expanded treatment of the number system.

Oral/aural : Comprehension of discussions by native speakers in lectures, on radio and television programmes, etc. on reasonably familiar topics. Participating in and reporting on discussions and debates to do with familiar topics.

Reading/writing : Reading and writing critically and meaningfully about a range of topics and texts of personal interest or related to academic programme content.

LSP Business : Translation of straightforward work-related texts. Production of plans, reports, etc.

Culture, literature and social context : Study of selected literary texts and discussion of their social and cultural context.

Portfolio : A journal to monitor own learning: most useful new vocabulary and phraseology, most frequent errors in speaking and writing, and corrective actions. Retention of written work submitted and corrected.
